GAA News - Dr. Theresa Mamah, Children's Author, Storyteller, and Musician with the mission to help young readers across the globe create something beautiful out of a difficult experience will speak at the 2015 US-Africa Business Matchmaking Conference in Austin-Texas.

Dr. Theresa Mamah is a Children's Author, Storyteller, and Musician with the mission to help young readers across the globe create something beautiful out of a difficult experience. At the heart of her new children's book, What the Baby Saw, is Dr. Mamah's revelation of how one can face death, adoption, immigration, and uncertainty, all factors she confronted and overcame during her childhood.

Born from a Hungarian mother and Nigerian father, Dr. Mamah refined her skill of writing after hearing culturally rooted stories from her parents about their childhood, which were entrenched in faith and nobility. Her father, Dr. Matthew Okpoma Mamah obtained his Ph.D. in Chemical Engineering and later became a politician and President of the Chamber of Commerce, Industry, Mines, and Agriculture in Port-Harcourt, Nigeria. Theresa's mother, Judit Agota Mamah, a chemical engineer, philanthropist, music teacher, and the author of three children's books, instilled the love of writing into her five children, particularly Theresa.
